

Nada Langhe Bianco

Very nice blend of Sauvignon Blanc and Arneis. 6 months on the lees, then stainless steel. This is Italy's version of Sancerre. Light straw in color, with a muted nose, that displays hints of citrus, rubber and sea salt. Lemons, river stone, ocean, fresh cut grass, and neutral acidity with a medium finish. The mouthfeel is plush for a wine with searing minerality. This would pair amazing with oysters

Pale golden yellow. Intense and lovely, with the first sniff, quite surprising nose: ripe fruit, flowers, honey, gooseberries with their characteristic sweet-bitter notes, some fresh grass. The remarkable aromas remind me of Americana grapes.

On the palate, the wine satisfies with a quite full body and a felicitous combination between delicate residual sweetness and supporting acidity. The finish is long and crisp. Not overly deep, not trivial either. Rather a dinner companion. A wine that might surprise...
